Weather Key Points

Regional Operations Center

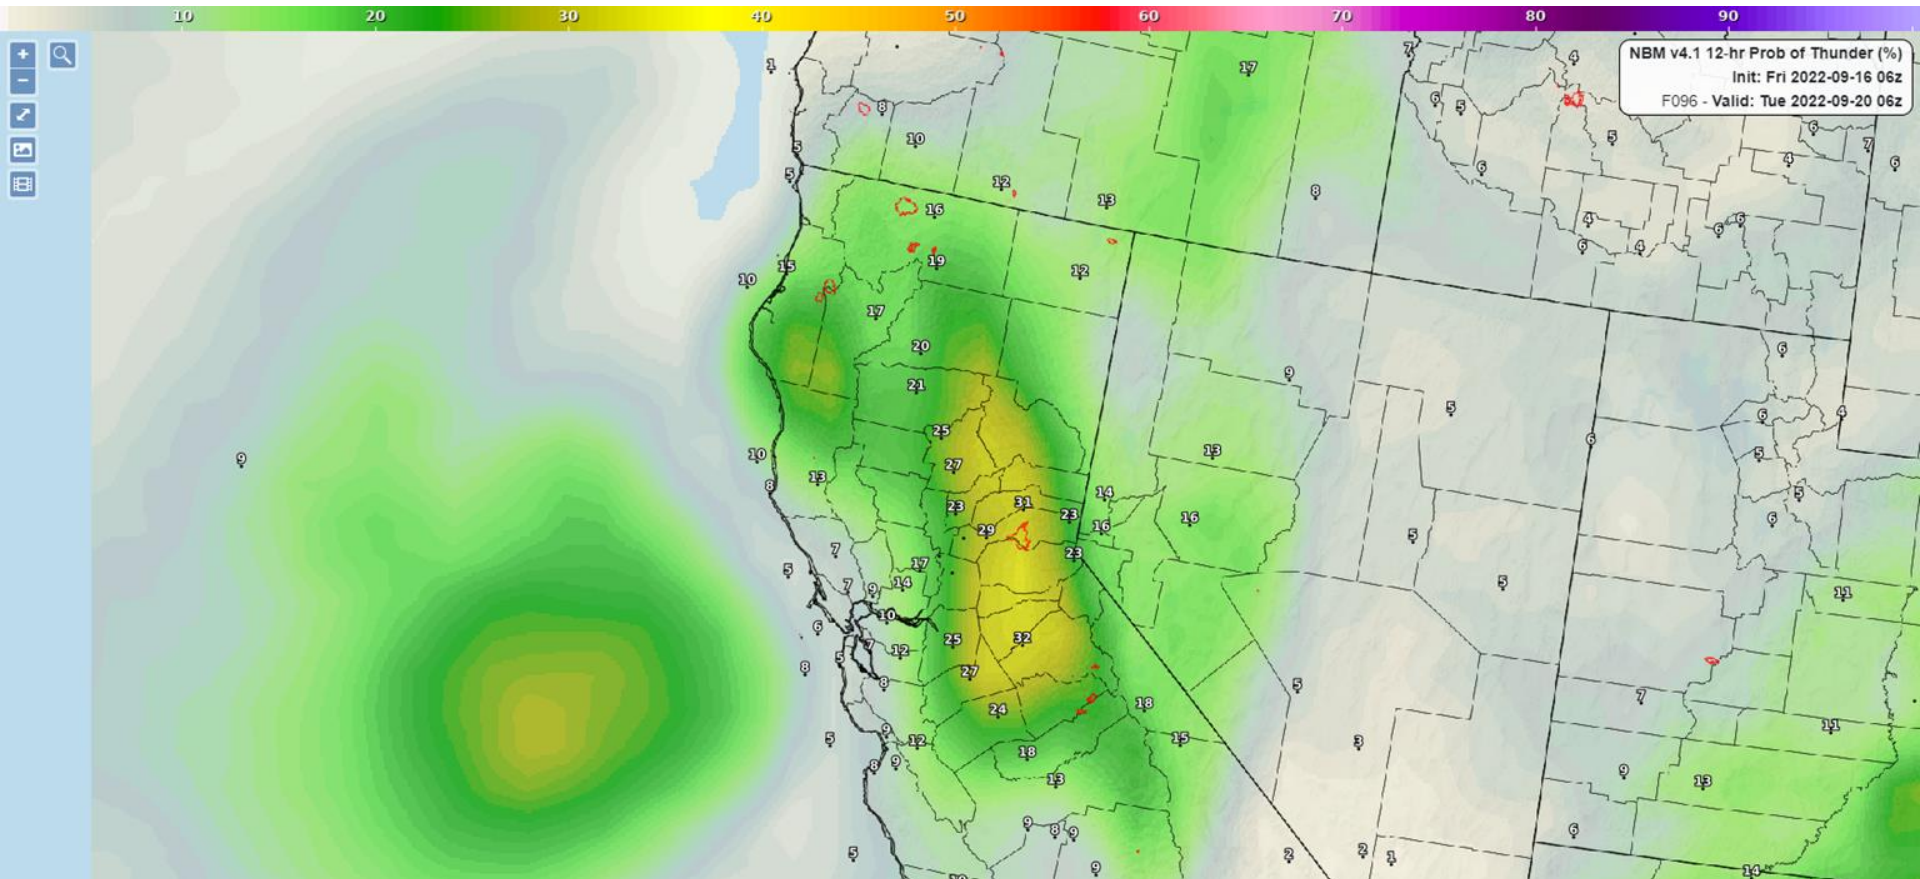

Western Region

Friday, September 16

- Cooler than normal conditions today, but will have some locally elevated Fire weather conditions across the southern mountains and foothills and the Sierra Friday due to breezy winds gusting up to 20-30 mph
 - A few thunderstorms are also possible across far northern California on Friday afternoon and early evening, bringing a threat for some lightning
 - Trinity Alps to Mount Shasta to near Medicine Lake
 - Southeast Lake County
 - Light to moderate rainfall amounts expected, with no concerns for burn scars in these areas Friday
- Gusty winds of 20-25 mph ahead of the rainfall with the next storm system will slightly increase fire weather concerns Saturday, especially over the Sierra
- Widespread rainfall is expected for northern California and the Central Coast this weekend into early next week (widespread 90%+ probabilities for at least 0.25" Saturday night-Tuesday)
 - Greatest rainfall amounts in the North Bay areas with 1 to 3 inches Saturday evening through Tuesday, with highest amounts Sunday into Monday
 - Coastal Mountain ranges like the Santa Cruz and Santa Lucia's generally 1 to 2 inches of rainfall expected Saturday evening through Tuesday
 - Some light snow is also possible above about 8500 feet above sea level over the high Sierra Sunday through Wednesday, though no significant accumulation is expected at this time

Weather Key Points

- Thunderstorm threats increase across northern California Monday and Monday night, with increasing concerns about potential for heavier rainfall rates on Sierra burn scars, but confidence is still low at this point

Graphic shows the chances for thunderstorms Monday into Monday evening, overlaid on the current active fire perimeters.
